PRICES ARE LOWER IN ALL THE WORLD

Statistics of Bureau Show Decrease in Values in Commerce.

A decided falling off in commercial values all over the world is noted in a report just issued by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor. The decline has been noted in the United States no worse than other countries.

The value of imports into the United Kingdom declined $124,000,000 in the nine months ending March 1, 1909, compared with a similar period of the year before. German imports declined $102,000,000 and Austrian nearly as much. Russia shows a slight gain as does also Cuba.

The Bureau of Statistics believes this fall in values is due to the lower prices of the principal articles of commerce.

The association will have as a visitor Evan R. Tucker, president of the Northeast Washington Citizens' Association, who will talk on the "Gas Question." A considerable amount of routine business is to come before the meeting.

CHAUFFEURS WIG-WAG WHEN COAST IS CLEAR

Existence of Signal System to Beat Watchful Eyes of the Law Admitted by Driver Arrested for Speeding.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Chauffeurs who want to break the law, like hoboes who fear the law, have a system of signs and signals by which they warn one another of danger ahead or signify that the coast is clear. The system may be something like this:

Three joyous toots of the auto horn: Go as fast as you like, the motor cycle cop has fallen in a ditch.

Waving cap around head: Go slow. Just killed a farmer's dog; he's around the next turn of the road with a double-barreled shotgun.

Kissing the girl next to him: We're eloping. Try to smash the next car; her old man is in it.

Two sharp toots of horn, followed by a long blast: Turn and run for your life; your employer knows you're on a joy ride, and is in a racer looking for you.

Arising and waving one arm: Those infernal Jersey deputies have a chain across the road half a mile back.

Standing on head on steering wheel: Everything is wide open. Fine chance for sport ahead. Not a cop in sight and an orphan asylum crossing the street a block away.

Whatever the signals and their meaning, the fact that chauffeurs have a secret code was revealed to Magistrate Fitch, in Flushing police court. Harry J. Curran, an automobile demonstrator, 200 West Seventieth street, Manhattan, was arrested. Policeman McAvoy charged him with running his machine at the modest pace of thirty-five miles an hour.

"That's impossible," said Curran, confidently, "a chauffeur had just signalled me that the police were watching for speeders on that road."

"What!" cried the magistrate, indignantly. "Do you mean to say you chauffeurs have a system of signals to warn each other against the police?"

"Automobilists use a generally understood code of signals," Curran admitted reluctantly. "Of course, one is a warning that the police are in the vicinity."

"Outrageous plan to violate the law with impunity," exclaimed the magistrate, and he held Curran in $100 bail for trial.

Ginghams; prints—do you know how they should be washed?

This is the way: In lukewarm water, in which Ivory Soap has been dissolved. Rub as lightly as possible. Rinse well, wring thoroughly and dry quickly, not in the sun.

The secret of washing prints so that the colors will not fade is in doing it quickly and in using Ivory Soap.

ICE CREAM CRUSADE.

HARRISBURG, May 7.—The special agents of the dairy and food department have started a crusade against the vendors of so-called ice cream about the city. Special Agent C. C. Linton took a number of samples from forgers who peddle the ice cream about the city in pushcarts and sell it in the form of sandwiches and ice cream cones.
